The brief collection descriptions include a summary of key points of information to assist researchers in selecting materials/documents and provides links to tools (finding aids, inventories, and others).

Finding aids, which are guides to the collections, are available for processed collections. These guides provide historical and/or biographical information, as well as a description and detailed listing of a collection's content. Inventories and/or databases are also available for otherwise unprocessed collections that are open for research. Information on archival holdings can also be accessed through CUNY+ and other national databases.

The holdings are arranged in alphabetical order.

We strongly recommend that researchers utilize finding aids in order to assist with any information you may be looking for.
